About Me

Since I was a kid, I've always loved the ability to create things "out of nothing," and in many ways, that's what development is about—having the chance to think of something and then see it come to life digitally on a screen. That sums up a bit of who I am: a highly creative, entrepreneurial person who's always looking for solutions to problems, with an aesthetic touch in everything I do. Besides being a developer, I'm also a graphic designer, which lets me combine both skills into one, creating quality projects with great attention to detail and adding much more value to every job I take on.
